During the lame duck session, on January 6, 2011, the House passed SB3539, the capital punishment abolition bill. The Senate passed the measure shortly thereafter on January 11. The Governor then signed the measure on March 9, and he commuted the sentences of the fifteen men on death row to Life Without Parole. On July 1, 2011, capital punishment was officially abolished in Illinois.